It is both my honor and my pleasure to welcome you to the 63rd Annual Meeting and Health Education Conference of the Alabama Public Health Association. We are excited to return to Prattville this year in such beautiful surroundings, just a stone's throw from the current construction underway on our long-awaited new state health laboratories. This year's conference chair has worked very hard to secure not only this wonderful venue and all that it has to offer, but also a broad variety of topics presented by talented and qualified speakers. This year's theme of “The Changing Tides of Public Health” is as timely as it is important, because this past year has been one of significant changes for public health and related fields in Alabama and the next couple of years promise even more uncertainties to come. Nevertheless, we shall endure and continue to sail those “tides.”

During your time at the conference, please take the opportunities between sessions to visit our vendors and information tables, as well as our silent auction which is always a lot of fun. Together, they play a vital role in funding this conference and the scholarships awarded. Finally, I encourage you to make the most of the meals and breaks throughout the conference by making an effort to meet new colleagues in our field and, of course, to visit with old friends and coworkers. Working together toward common goals is always important, but it becomes even more essential as tides change and resources dwindle.

Thank you very much for attending our conference, and a special thanks to all who worked hard and gave so freely of themselves to make this event possible!

Richard W. Burleson, MBA, MPH
President
Welcome to your conference, “The Changing Tides of Public Health.” I’m sorry I won’t be joining you as you contemplate what is shifting in public health in Alabama and the nation. As you know, APHA presidents visit states once every three years and Dr. Joseph Telfair spoke at your annual meeting in 2018.

I suspect many of you were either engaged in nominating someone for the many awards ALPHA gives or in serving on committees to determine recipients. I applaud you for your array of awards. Recognizing excellence among our peers is an important part of being an affiliate. Too often the work of public health professionals goes unrecognized and underappreciated.

And what a bonus, you also provide a scholarship to an ALPHA member to attend a baccalaureate or graduate nursing program. No bias here (well, not too much) ... a career as a public health nurse, a nurse practitioner working in a primary care environment, a researcher investigating the evidence that supports practice, or an educator preparing the next generation of public health professionals are all exciting possibilities for a scholarship recipient. Would it not be wonderful if some of the other disciplines in public health in Alabama were also able to secure funds for scholarships?

Your theme suggests that you will be doing what public health professionals have done over time ... evaluating and modifying programs and approaches as opportunities and challenges push us in new directions. I would ask that you consider what evidence we have to support new directions and what it is that we don’t know but would be important to learn. An affiliate meeting is a great time for practitioners, program evaluators, researchers, funders, policy makers, and others to discuss public health’s evidence base.

Mark your calendar now for APHA’s annual meeting, November 2-6, 2019, in Philadelphia. Also watch for an announcement of APHA’s one-day health policy conference which will likely be on February 12, 2020, in Washington, DC at Marriott Marquis. This year’s session was packed with great discussions and thought-provoking speakers.

Thank you for working with us to address APHA’s overarching priorities of ensuring the right to health and health care, creating health equity, and building public health infrastructure and capacity. As you know, our goal is to create the healthiest nation in one generation. This requires initiatives at national, state and local levels.

Have a stimulating meeting. I hope to meet many of you in Philadelphia in November!

Pamela M. Aaltonen, PhD, RN
APHA President, 2018-2019
A Message from the State Health Officer

Dear Colleagues:

On behalf of the Alabama Department of Public Health, I would like to welcome you to the 63rd Annual Health Education Conference of the Alabama Public Health Association. This year’s conference theme is “The Changing Tides of Public Health.” This theme reflects the changes that are occurring in public health and how we are working to adapt to them by drawing from your institutional knowledge, experience, and vision for the future.

An excellent and inspiring program awaits you, with plenary sessions on professionalism, leadership, improving attitudes and motivation, opioid issues, and service dogs. In addition to the general sessions, you will find many timely topics offered in the numerous breakout sessions that cover subjects of interest ranging from childhood lead poisoning prevention to lifestyle modification programs with an interprofessional referral system.

During the conference, I hope you will take every opportunity to meet with your colleagues, participate in discussions, and improve your skills. Please take advantage of the reception generously sponsored by the University of Alabama at Birmingham School of Public Health on Thursday evening, the E. Kenneth Aycock Breakfast Friday morning, and visit and bid on silent auction items.

I would like to congratulate in advance the outstanding individuals who will be receiving awards recognizing them for the services they provide in advancing public health. Finally, I would like to thank the program committee and all of our partners for their participation in planning and conducting this annual education conference. All of you truly make a difference in the lives of others, and I thank you for your service to the citizens of Alabama. Best wishes for a successful conference.

Sincerely,

Scott Harris, M.D., M.P.H.
State Health Officer
A Message From the Dean of the UAB School of Public Health

To the members of the Alabama Public Health Association, conference honorees, and guests:

As Dean of the School of Public Health at the University of Alabama at Birmingham, I am honored to welcome you to AlPHA’s 63rd Annual Meeting & Health Education Conference! What a great opportunity to join with public health partners across this great state – from those of you in governmental public health practice, to those who work for public health-related agencies and organizations, to academic colleagues located in many colleges and universities, and to those who as individuals simply bring their passion and concern about the health and well-being of our communities. So much of our work is about relationship building, and I know of no better venue for public health networking than this annual conference – make the most of being here! I am certain there is something to be learned and gained by all who attend, no matter your background, training, or current position.

The theme of this year’s conference - The Changing Tides of Public Health – resonates on so many different levels, from the role of the public health official as the Chief Health Strategist in Public Health 3.0, to the human health impact of climate change, to the ever-changing demographics of the communities we serve. Indeed, as the saying goes, “Change is the only constant.” I am a part of that change – returning to Alabama after being away some 35 years, to bring my life’s work in both public health practice and academia to address the over-arching public health challenges that are before us. I look forward to meeting you, to hearing about your work, and to exploring opportunities for me to build new networks. Thank you for all that you do to improve and sustain the public's health in Alabama, and enjoy the conference!

IRA L. MYERS SCHOLARSHIP FOR GRADUATE STUDY IN PUBLIC HEALTH

Each year, the Alabama Public Health Association, Inc. awards the Ira L. Myers Scholarship to an individual who is an active member of the association and who qualifies for admission as a candidate for a master’s or Doctorate of Public Health degree at the School of Public Health at the University of Alabama at Birmingham.

The scholarship, given in honor of Ira L. Myers, M.D., M.P.H., who served as the State Health Officer of Alabama for 23 years, exemplifies the true spirit of cooperation and collaboration needed between academic and public health practice in working together to improve the health of the population we serve. The School of Public Health congratulates the recipients of this scholarship and the members of the association on their many contributions to public health. We look forward to our continued partnership in this and many other endeavors.
